

To the FCC:

I am severely disturbed to hear that you are considering lifting the cross-ownership ban on corporations owning newspapers and TV stations in the same city. Diversity in media is crucial for democracy. If all of the news coming to the public in a city comes from just one source, what possible room for debate, or consideration of bias is there? A diversity of voices in the media is vital to democracy, and I am deeply troubled that you are considering action that would put the American media in the hands of a very few powerful interests. I hope you will not lift this ban.
